Hidden Security Camera

Amazon Echo Show 5, 8 and 10 smart displays can be used like a security camera. The settings are accessed not from the app, but from the device itself from its settings menu. After you chose Home Monitoring, you'll have to verify your account and enter your password. You can also choose Audio Alert, which will play a sound on the device so people in the room will know the device is on. If you choose Video Delay, the display blurs for a few seconds, giving people in the room time to to sort themselves out. Once you start home monitoring, you'll be able to use the Echo to pan left and right. Unlike to Alexa Drop-In app, home monitoring doesn't show a picture of the monitoring user.

Thank You For The Kind Words

Roy D Green

My car shut down three hours from home, and Du Fresne responded with efficiency, proficiency and friendliness. The repair was done well and at lower cost than expected, and they went the extra mile for me. Happy customer!

Nancy Morgan

We've now brought four vehicles in for inspection/ service to DuFresne's. The work is always top notch at reasonable prices. The staff is responsible and friendly. Won't go anywhere else

Allen Cheng

The people at Dufresnes are some of the most helpful and ethical professionals I've had the pleasure of interacting with. I recently had a problem where Beaverton Honda was screwing with me on my low mileage car just one month out of warranty. I brought my car to DuFresne's to do the work, since I was really angry at Beaverton Honda. Mike, rather than taking on the job, thought it was really poor form on Honda's part and took it upon himself to call his contacts at Honda for me to try to get them to cover the work (at the dealership). He went out of his way, made several calls, checked in with me over several weeks, and advised me on how to proceed all to NOT have me pay them to do work on my car. They did this because they thought it was the right thing to do. I will absolutely continue to go to Dufresne's for everything auto related (sans body work, which they don't do). Other things about Dufresnes besides good people: Quick to get an appointment Loaner cars Good coffee Thanks Dufresnes!

Franklin's quip reveals the high stakes of independence

It was a blast heard round the world, a declaration of treason as much as independence by a handful of colonists living on the other side of the Atlantic from the most powerful country in the world.

The congress in America voted to adopt the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776. A month later on August 2, they signed the document. Eight days after that the English King had a copy.

Following the natural rights theory of John Locke, the document proclaimed the equality of 'all men' and their 'unalienable rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness,' Thomas Jefferson, helped by others, wrote that governments were established to secure these rights; when they failed to do so, the people could abolish them.

That last bit was a nice thought, but King George III would disagree.

And so, at the signing of the Declaration, John Hancock worried that some would lose heart and their fire for independence would wane. He said "We must all hang together."

Always the sharp wit, Benjamin Franklin smiled and said, "Or most assuredly we will all hang separately."

How to solve Sudoku puzzles

No math is required to solve a sudoku. You only need logic and patience. Simply make sure that each 3x3 square region has only one instance of the numbers 1-9. Similarly, each number can only appear once in a column or row in the larger grid. The difficulty of this puzzle is easy.

The national happy march satisfies the urge to conduct the band

If you are older, you may not have heard it for a while. If you are younger, you may never have heard it. Either way, on July 4, find the The Stars & Stripes Forever and listen. You'll want to conduct the band with abandon and smash the cymbals. It's a giant, jubilant march, with stirring lyrics which, for fun, you can also substitute for a duck song (Be kind to your web-footed friends...). John Philip Sousa -- Marine, musician and band leader -- was returning to the United States from a vacation in Italy in 1896. It was Christmas Day and from the deck of an ocean liner, he heard the march in his head. "Suddenly, I began to sense the rhythmic beat of a band playing within my brain," Sousa wrote in his autobiography Marching Along. "It kept on ceaselessly playing ... the imaginary band continued to unfold the same themes, echoing and re-echoing the most distinct melody. "I did not transfer a note of that music to paper while I was on the steamer, but when we reached shore I set down the measures that my brain-band had been playing for me, and not a note of it has ever changed," he wrote.

The song repeats distinct melodies in sections, called strains, using different instruments to repeat and lead. So the song begins with a hearty introduction by the horns with great smashing beats on drums, followed by the melody. Woodwinds repeat, and later, the famous response of the piccolos. The trombones thunder in with a bold counter melody. Then, the entire band plays together -- and, by then, we're all marching. While it is the official national march of the United States, the tune has also been adopted by soccer fans in the UK, sung as 'Here We Go,' once called a working class march. Cartoon character Popeye fought bad guys to the song. Comedians invented the duck lyrics. The Grateful Dead played it to retire. One strange Stars & Stripes Forever fact: Circuses in the early 20th century loved to fire up the crowd with march music, but they never played The Stars & Stripes Forever. This tune was a secret signal, only played when a life-threatening disaster was imminent. When they heard it, emergency personnel would try to quietly disperse the crowd, not always successfully.

The CDC Is Begging People To Stop Kissing Their... Chickens?

Don't kiss chickens We're a nation of animal lovers - according to Spots, about 67 percent of American households own at least one kind of pet. Not only do we love animals, we love them more than we used to: In a 2016 survey, researchers found that Americans feel significantly more positive about all kinds of animals than they used to - even the less cuddly ones like bats and sharks. It's no surprise that we love our chickens, too - so much that federal health officials have issued a stern warning: Stop hugging and kissing ducks and chickens, or risk illness.

According to the New York Times, the warning is due to a salmonella outbreak linked to backyard poultry, with 163 illnesses and 34 hospitalizations in 43 states.

Keeping poultry at home in a backyard coop is fine, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, but owners should wash hands for 20 seconds after contact with birds and related supplies and not allow small children to touch them.

While stories abound about people who have a chicken as a pet, those who have owned chickens as a hobby may not be inclined to kiss them anyway. "They can be jerks," said one coop owner.
